

Caddisfly Larva

Caddisflies build heavy cases of pebbles, sticks or leaves to protect themselves. They absorb oxygen through their exoskeleton and are filter feeders, eating mainly small plant particles or algae.

 You must place both feet in a sack and hop across the field! ***

Caddisfly Larva

Caddisflies build heavy cases of pebbles, sticks or leaves to protect themselves. They absorb oxygen through their exoskeleton and are filter feeders, eating mainly small plant particles or algae.

 You must place both feet in a sack and hop across the field! ***

Caddisfly Larva

Caddisflies build heavy cases of pebbles, sticks or leaves to protect themselves. They absorb oxygen through their exoskeleton and are filter feeders, eating mainly small plant particles or algae.

 You must place both feet in a sack and hop across the field! ***